Reading. Read the text and for questions, 1-5 choose the best answer (A, B, C, or D).The Egyptian Solar Boats

In 2008, thousands of tourists gathered at Egypt's Solar Boat Museum to see a boat that had been excavated over 20 years before that. Three years later, in June 2011, excavations began for the second boat that had lain there hidden for centuries. These boats were sealed in a pit and covered by massive limestone slabs at the base of the Great Pyramid of Giza about 4,500 years ago.

The Great Pyramid of Giza is the tomb of King Khufu who reigned over Egypt for about 26 years. In that short time however, he managed to build the biggest pyramid in Egypt and what is now considered one of the seven wonders of the world. In true Egyptian tradition, he was buried with all his possessions and objects that would protect him and help him travel in the afterlife, including his solar boats.

These boats, or solar boats as they were called, were very important in the afterlife for ancient Egyptians. It was believed that the sun god Ra would sail through the afterlife each night to battle against other gods and beasts. The solar boats were buried with the dead in order to help them during similar journeys. The oars of the boats were symbolic of the weapons Ra used, but there were no sails as they were never meant to actually sail on water.

Each of these solar boats were buried in pieces. The first boat was found disassembled in a hundred-foot-long pit. The wooden pieces had been placed tightly together and piled in over a dozen layers. It took months to remove all the pieces from the pit and almost 20 years to assemble the ship and have it ready for showing. It is about 140 feet long and probably bigger than the sister ship still buried. It is on display in Giza's Solar Boat Museum.

The second boat is buried in the same manner and will take about the same amount of time for excavation and restoration. All measures are being taken to protect the pieces from any damage and allow for safe excavation. When the job is done, the world will once again gather to admire another great archeological discovery from the past.

How many years have the boats been hidden underground?

Seleccione una:
